AI IN ANIRBHAR BHARAT

WITH BFSI IDENTIFIED AS CRITICAL INFORMATION INFRASTRUCTURE...

Banks told to Take Quantum Leap

Lenders discussing matter internally, working group under SBI chief looking into it

Dheeraaj Tiwari

New Delhi: The government has directed banks to develop a sector-wide quantum transition and adoption strategy, along with an artificial intelligence (AI) resilience framework. This follows the identification of the banking, financial services and insurance (BFSI) sector as critical information infrastructure, said people familiar with the matter.

"Banks are internally discussing the matter, and a working group under the State Bank of India chairman is looking into it," an executive said on condition of anonymity, adding that other aspects under consideration are frontier AI models and associated risks, including development of a sectoral framework on AI-driven cyber threats.

According to the industry, major concerns in this segment include 'harvest now, decrypt later' threats, where cyber adversaries stockpile encrypted banking data for future quantum decryption. The finance ministry has also asked banks to assess post-quantum vulnerabilities and initiate mitigation measures, said an official, who did not wish to be identified. "Each bank can prepare its internal strategy, but there has to be some common industry parameters," he added.

Earlier, public sector banks were asked to explore quantum-resistant, advanced-level encryption as an additional security layer under the hackathon themes. Under the banks' reform agenda, Ease 9.0, state-run banks are as-

The report highlighted that most banking institutions remain in the early stages of quantum preparedness and that boards, chief information security officers and regulators would increasingly focus on quantum readiness as a risk management priority.

Growth Hinges on Local Reforms, Not Protectionism: Gill

Economist says a lot depends on adopting AI, and using capital, talent & energy efficiently

Anousha Sawhney

New Delhi: India is in a "conditionally great" position to sustain growth, but turning that opportunity into lasting prosperity will depend less on external conditions and more on how quickly it opens its economy, adopts artificial intelligence and uses capital, talent and energy efficiently, said Indermitt Gill, distinguished visiting fellow at Stanford University's Hoover Institution.

The country has strong domestic consumption, relatively low private-sector debt and favourable demographics, along with rapidly expanding digital and physical infrastructure. But the growth opportunity is conditional: "The transition should be driven by domestic reforms rather than protectionism, Gill, a former chief economist and senior vice president for development economics at the World Bank Group, said in an interview with ET in New Delhi.

The global environment may be uncertain, but "the ball is in India's court," he said, adding that one of the key factors were on one part of India's growth challenge, Gill pointed to "inefficient" allocation of capital, talent and energy as major hurdles within the country.

Productive companies need to expand, while unproductive companies need to exit and free up scarce capital, talent and land. India's difficulty in achieving this has contributed to a corporate sector in which too many firms remain small and too few scale up into globally competitive enterprises, he said.

"The 'Rake Lens' gives train examiners a single-screen view of repair dues, alerts and unusual observations. A map-based application also tracks rakes over for routine overhaul," the official said.

said Gill. Barriers ranging from workplace discrimination to concerns about safety reduce the country's productive capacity, he said. Energy efficiency is another issue. India uses significantly more energy for each unit of economic output than many other economies, according to Gill. Improving efficiency could therefore provide a substantial productivity dividend without requiring a corresponding increase in energy supply.

Restructuring of global supply chains offers an opportunity that India needs to pursue, he said. As companies diversify production away from China or elsewhere, India could emerge as a major alternative destination. Policymakers need to identify companies considering leaving an economy, say Japanese companies exiting to China, and aggressively make the case for locating production in India, Gill said.

New Delhi: In a first, India's toll volume fell in the first six months of the current financial year while the rise in toll value moderated significantly from previous years, with experts attributing the trend to the introduction of the annual pass in 2025.

Government data shows toll volume fell 5.2% to 2.13 billion in April-September from 2.25 billion in the year-ago period. Toll revenue rose 6.2% to ₹42,971.82 crore from ₹40,433.53 crore in the same period of 2025-26, a much slower pace of growth than in previous years.

The number of toll transactions in 2025-26 stood at 4.45 billion, up 5.6% from 4.2 billion in the preceding year. Toll revenue generated in 2025-26 was 13.67% higher at ₹42,971.82 crore, compared with ₹42,900.85 crore.

"Last year we registered an increase of 13.7% in toll revenue compared to the preceding year. However, this year we see some slowdown in revenue growth, in the range of 7-8%, because of higher base effect," a senior government official said.

According to the official, annual pass transactions are not included in the data, resulting in a decline in reported toll transactions. "Going forward we anticipate a pick up in both volume and value of toll collection on the back of a surge in commercial traffic in the festival and wedding months," the official said.

"The introduction of annual toll passes would have contributed to the reduction in reported toll volumes, while actual road usage remains supported," said Jagannathan Padmanabhan, senior director and global head, Csril Intelligence.

Rlys Plans Recast of Freight Wagon Ops

THE AIM AI-based defect detection, predictive maintenance and real-time sensors

Twesh Mishra

New Delhi: Indian Railways is planning an overhaul of its freight wagon operations, turning to artificial intelligence-based defect detection, predictive maintenance and real-time sensors to improve reliability and safety and attract more business to rail.

officials said.

"The plan focuses on improving wagon reliability, maintenance quality, freight speeds and customer service are being finalised," one of the officials said, adding that a field trial of an AI-based system to detect wagon defects across selected zones will begin shortly.

"This would analyse images to identify damaged, missing or hanging components on moving wagons," the official said.

A dedicated freight 'Madad' grievance portal, electronic brake-power certificates, refrigerated containers and a universal wagon for steel products are also planned, the official said.

The portal will create a grievance channel for wagon users and loading or unloading parties. Complaints would flow into the maintenance system for timely action.

"This will ensure concerns of freight customers are addressed in real time," the official said. "The goal is to make railways a more lucrative commercial transport medium."

Besides addressing commercial concerns, the national transporter also expects to improve the reliability of its network through predictive maintenance. "The aim is to find emerging defects before components fail," a second official said, noting that sensor readings and inspection data help maintenance teams identify unusual heat, impact, loading or wear patterns.

Similar machine-vision systems have been used on the Dedicated Freight Corridor. They use line-scan and area-scan cameras to capture undercarriage defects while trains are moving. According to official estimates, the system generated 5,248 confirmed defects from 115,454 wagons inspected. Officials are considering linking its data with Indian Railways' freight maintenance and operations systems. The move aims to improve digital oversight of wagon maintenance.

"The 'Rake Lens' gives train examiners a single-screen view of repair dues, alerts and unusual observations. A map-based application also tracks rakes over for routine overhaul," the official said.
